

ABSTRACT

A brassiere intended for use by women having asymmetrical breasts which are not comfortably or properly received in and/or supported by the symmetrical breast cups
5 provided in the usual brassiere. A brassiere according to this invention comprises a unitary garment having a body section adapted to encircle the midriff of a woman having asymmetrical breasts, closure means providing for adjustment of the body section to the midriff of the woman, and a pair of asymmetrical breast cups carried by the body section, such body section positioning the cups to comfortably and properly
10 receive and support the asymmetrical breasts of the woman.